

M.D. Friedman

Jared Smith

SETH

M. D. Friedman is a poet, teacher, musician, photographer, digital artist and web designer. He has published four volumes of poetry, is widely published in small press and online, and won an International New Zealand Poetry Society contest in 2008. His new genre of digital poetry represents the artistic fusion of all his creative pursuits. He is the founder of Internet Poets' Cooperative website and is the producer and host of the Poets' Co-op TV Show.

Jared Smith is a prominent figure in contemporary poetry, technology research, and professional continuing education. He is the author of nine volumes of poetry and has had hundreds of publications in literary journals. He has given readings, workshops and classes at colleges, schools, libraries and coffee houses around the country.

SETH is considered one of Denver's more popular performance poets. He began as a fiction writer and has published most of his short stories. He has also written and performed radio theater comedy, worked with kids on writing and producing, authored a hit musical and, most recently, completed his first novel.
