

The Solstice Eclipse

the caliginous moon	beams through cloud rib	scarred with stars wayward moon	rides a barren sky	bursting with stars heavy with shadow	no more moon milk	shriveled breasts the mother cries	wails through the void	bulging pregnant solstice sky	eye blackened	moon bruised skin earth flushed flesh	shadow hunts shadow	through fogged dome buoyant as feather	chases its tail	leaks lunar darkness in a wolf howl wind	dives through	deep orange bloated balloon of	dusky moon dust	skin shrivels off light made dark	swelling tangerine ball	clings to the fall smudges the blood ripe	mother of pain	torn from death's tit moon fed father	claws ice collar	dream skin lit glowing night	magnifies what we fear	itches with stars pearl black shine	night wizened wafer	stings with stars sheds its sheen	as round as tear	the white of eye silk cloaked skin	cold bowl of eye	burns with light stained with darkness	looking inward	heaves the climax no longer obscures	bubbles up	with all that is dark pastel starlight	blisters moon skin	into the night